To preserve the record, Mr. Richardson again today moved that the jury be instructed to return a verdict of not guilty on the ground that the defendant Haywood has not been connected by the evidence with the crime alleged. The motion was formally made and formally denied. Court adjourned until 2 p.m.

Yesterdays Proceedings.

After a long day of argument about the exclusion or admission to the jury's consideration of the evidence adduced by the defense dealing with the conditions of violence in Colorado, the riots and the raids that were made by the miners on the mineowners' property and by the mineowners and other citizens on the property of the miners, Clarence Darrow was the first to speak for the defense. He spent some time in discussing and citing authorities as to the materiality of the evidence showing threats on the part of Orchard against Gov. Steunenberg. He declared that if there was any question as to the relevancy of any of the testimony in the case the doubt should be resolved in favor of the defendant. owners' property and by the mineowners defendant.

Mr. Darrow charged the Independence explosion directly to K. C. Sterling, the detective of the Mineowners' Association. Three undisputed witnesses, he declared, had told of seeing Orchard "sneak" into had told of seeing Orchard "sneak" into Sterling's room at night on at least fifteen occasions. The explosion was a part of the conspiracy, the attorney asserted, of the men who were "engaged in the laudable occupation of driving out every man who had ever shown any sympathy with the Western Federation of Miners. The men who defied sheriffs and courts and set themselves up as the only competent

"At any rate," he added, "these witnesses have not been arrested for perjury on the word of the most perjured villain who ever came into a courtroom—Harry Orchard."

Pinkertons Called Vermin. As to the Pinkerton detectives who were placed in the various local unions, Mr. Darrow said, the jury should be allowed to take these acts into consideration. "They should not be charged up to the union, these men who incited the act of violence, and the union should not be held violence, and the union should not be held wholly responsible for them. They were on the payrool of the Pinkertons, these miserable agents who made incendiary speeches. Are we going to convict Bill Haywood for responsibility for these vermin, who have even invaded this courthouse and tried to get upon the witness stand as our witnesses?

"The jury should have all the facts that this case has developed. We objected to the state going to Colorado to convict these men of a crime in Idaho."

"We did not want to go into all these de-

We did not want to go into all these de-"We did not want to go into all these details, but the state was allowed to place before the jury every jot and tittle, every isolated circumstance, every bit of testimony that could in any way tend to corroborate any statement of Harry Orchard. Are they to be allowed to show every fact which might connect these defendants with any responsibility and we to be denied the right to present contradictory facts in order that the jury may determine for itself who was guilty and who responsible? Let the twelve men weigh the evidence. We shall rest content."

Borah Dissects Conspiracy.

When Senator Borah began his address in reply to Mr. Darrow he said that counsel for the defense in his opening address to the jury claimed that a conspiracy existed between the Pinkerton detectives, the toys and playthings during | Mine Owners' Association and the Citizens' the summer months—wheth-er at home or at the seashore of Miners out of Colorado, and that many of the crimes charged to the Western Fed-eration of Miners were, in fact, committed as incidents of the conspiracy to get rid of the union miners.

Our Summer Goods Department is complete with a stock of all the comp enberg. That was the personal revenge of Harry Orchard. The conspiracy had nothing to do with the death of Lyte Gregory. That was the result of personal difficulties. The conspiracy had nothing to do with the attempts on Justice Gabbert and Gov. Peanette of They were the results of political body. They were the results of political feeling.

"Suppose we admit, for the sake of argument, that a conspiracy existed, that fact has not been shown here by any competent evidence under any rule of law. I am not going to argue this case on the lines laid down by Mr. Darrow that they have not the right to prove a counter conspiracy—I am not going to oppose the principle that they have a right to prove it—but what I contend is they have not proved it. Let them put some member of the conspiracy. them put some member of the conspiracy on the stand and prove that the conspiracy is responsible for the crimes complained of. Testimony as to a conspiracy must come at first hand and cannot be accepted from a third party, who knows only by

"Let us admit for the sake of the argument that K. C. Sterling was the member of a conspiracy. What has the defense shown as to his connection with the Independence depot affair? That Orchard was seen to go to his rooms; that after the explosion Sterling was said to have called the dogs off the trail because he knew who committed the crime—that it was Steve Adams. There is nothing to show what Orchard and Sterling talked about. All we have is the statement of a third party that he heard Sterling make a declaration that he knew who committed the crime. said the senator, "for he was eight miles from the scene when called off."
"Let the jury say as to what they believe as to the dog," interrupted Attorney Richardson.

"Oh, no," said Borah, "I am going to have something to say as to that right now. There was a time when the testi-mony of bloodhounds was acceptable, but that was before Abraham Lincoln signed the Declaration of Independence." The senator was interrupted by a ripple of laughter in the crowded courtroom. Evidently intent upon his argument, he did not see the mistake for some moments. Then he laughed, too.

"I should have said the Proclamation of Emancipation," he explained, "but all the same it was a declaration of independence to some 20,000,000 people."

The Testimony of Dogs. Reading from authorities as to the admissibility of the action of bloodhounds, Senator Borah quoted from one which said that, while the testimony of such dogs had been acted upon by mobs, it had been who dened sheriffs and courts and set themselves up as the only competent didges."

accepted in a court of law only once—in Alabama—and then as expert testimony, the foundation for which had been laid by a thorough qualification of the dogs as to what they had done in the way of tracking prisoners. The dog put on the trail after tioned by the defense. With regard to the Pinkertons' connection with the case, Senator Borah said there was absolutely nothing in the testimony of the witness Friedman or in the documents he stole from the archives from the Pinker-ton office to connect the detectives with any of the crimes under investigation. Friedman admitted that the Mine Owners' Association was not a client of the Pinker-tons. Some individual mine owners were clients, but that was all.

"The defense makes much of the fact that Pinkerton operative Ridell went down to Telluride and joined the union and talked anarchy. He did not go there until after Arthur Collins had been killed and two men had disappeared, and the more he talked anarchy the higher he climbed in the Senator Borah said the state did not wish to strike out any of the evidence introduced by the defense as to Bradley or the Vinci-cator incidents, as he believed it legal, but he said there was nothing in support of the contention that the Mine Owners' Association had been responsible for any of Says Haywood Employed Orchard.

Upon Senator Borah's conclusion Attorney Richardson arose to make the closing argument for the defense. He said that very little had been heard in the case of the actual issue involvedthe assassination of Gov. Steunenberg. If there had been evidence directly to connect with this offense the Colorado troubles would never have been heard of. But the state was reduced to the claim that the killing of Steunenberg was but a mere in cident of the giant conspiracy, and in an effort to prove a conspiracy had to go to Colorado and get hold of widely separated circumstances. Orchard was not a member of the conspiracy set up by the state, Richardson beclared, but all he claimed was that he was the instrument selected from time to time to carry out some individually given instructions. "Orchard said Haywood had employed him to do certain things and the state attempts to connect him by a set of cir-cumstances. Haywood comes in and says will show a set of stronger circum-stances against some one else. I claim and urge it upon your honor that all of this evidence should get to the jury or none of it. You cannot convict these men of the killing of Steunenberg for what happened in Colorado."

Coming at the time it did, Richardson said the Independence depot explosion meant suicide to the Federation of Miners in the Cripple Creek district—it meant suicide to the Mine Owners' Association in their fight against the federation was suicide to the Mine Owners' Association in their fight against the federation, was what they desired and all they could wish for—but the most foolish, most unwise that anybody connected with the federation could devise.

Leaving Orchard's uncorroborated testimony out of the proposition, he said the circumstances indicated a far stronger motive on the part of the Mine Owners' Association than the Federation of Miners.

Mr. Richardson concluded at 3:35. Judge Wood announced that he might be prepared to decide the matter in the morning. Court then adjourned until today.
